Good day entities! And a fine day it is as we explore together a reality that presumes itself to be so real, so solid, so impressive and so integral to expression. But what if this reality is one you could recognize as a dream? What if this reality did not hold the integrity that it avails itself the appearance of? What if this reality you call life is nothing more than a belief system expressed?

First let us examine more closely, belief systems. Now this may seem remedial, as you have grown to understand reality. Readers of this magazine have learned a lot about beliefs and belief systems from many sources. However, I would suggest that even advanced souls who are more aware of the "layout of the land," so to speak, are ensconced within these very systems of thought if they are still operating within the body and are in resonance to this reality you call life.

Belief systems, indeed, are systems of thought about reality. These thoughts about reality literally become systems of thought as they individually coalesce and expand on themselves through the nature of the following masses. In other words, beliefs are thoughts about the way things work. That they are ideas about the way things work is to say that they live in the realm of ego. You, your thoughts, your beliefs, your bodies and all that you presume to be solid, tangible reality, live in the realm of ego.

When you forgot yourselves through the original separation from God in which you took one, very dramatic step away from the Godhead, you stepped into the reality called ego. Ego is another term with which you are familiar. It is an aspect of everyone and it will have you align to fear as it desperately attempts to protect itself from what it perceives as a threat from God. Now, of course, God does not even conceive of threat, as God is the pure essence and true reality of being. God holds eternity in love and light.

So, the separation from God begat the concept of ego and as ego understands itself to be fearful, it therefore thrives on fear. The more fear, the bigger the ego, and the egos of this world are currently in a state of terror. This terror is born of the fear ego understands of the Awakening. So many of you are awakening unto your true reality that ego, as it lives in you and in others, quakes in terror at its own perceived annihilation and it forges greater and greater belief systems, thoughts about reality, to re-engender itself supreme.

Now you, who are extensions of God, are now and forever, wholly complete and in the Oneness of God, except for your misaligned allegiance to the loudest voice you hear, ego's voice. Some of you may feel a twinge of resistance to that statement because you feel you have come so far and have moved so far beyond ego. Entities, I lovingly wish to remind you that resistance is a form of ego control and that you hear the voice at all is a statement that ego is directing your actions. That it is the loudest voice, simply cements that to the experience.

God never shouts, never corrals your attention, and never makes deals with you to remember Home. God never presumes a battle, but rather cannot conceive of battle. For God is the steady, level and always-reliable Source of Love, and Love cannot exist in the same space and time with ego. True Love is beyond this place and lives in the eternity of God.

This is where you wish to live and this is where your movement is taking you. This is you, soul extension, making the trek of returning to the awareness of Who You Are. To do this, you will literally go into a denial of sorts, which, when used in conjunction with ego, keeps you locked in the very position you wish to release from. But deny, you will, and this denial will be the denial of the falsehoods that ego has packaged into the belief systems that propagate its existence. When you reach the clarity to deny ego, you are in effect, accepting God. Once again, note any resistance to these statements, as many of you are absolutely certain you have accepted God. You definitely believe you have done so and feel that is requisite to finding Home.

I suggest that the belief in finding God, finding

Home, is a way in which ego can create the illusion that something is missing in you, for which remedy must be found. This perceived missing element is that connection to God. Make no mistake that ego will enact something of this nature. Trickery is its byproduct. So, ego will have you searching and seeking for your God while maintaining its status as director and keeping you at odds with yourself as you vacillate between success and failure. This, in essence, is an ego tool to lock you into the space of fear so as to continue the feeding of ego to ensure its survival.

What I wish to remind you is that God is alive and well within you. God does not need to be found; you never lost God. God is available to you always because you are God and you are of God. In other words, God is always Home, but God's peaceful nature and God's loving strength is being drowned out from your conscious awareness by the pleading and shouting of ego as it continues its relentless attempts at distraction.

So, belief systems create the illusion of reality while camouflaging the pure reality of your being. There literally are two ways of expression, one being belief and the other being knowing. Beliefs are forever projected outward onto something or someone that you incorrectly perceive as separate from yourself. This is a continual reminder of the sense of separation that you felt as you took that first and fateful step away from God. This creates fear and desperation within you because it is such an obscure and isolated feeling, though beneath the fear, deep within, you understand its false premise and this is integral to your Awakening. But because of the fear, you do what you can to alleviate that fear and so you create beliefs about reality that soothe this dilemma. And, you adopt other people's versions of belief systems, feeling as though you are truly unifying that desperate separation. As you follow on this path, you enter the field of chaos and confusion that out sources ego through fear expression.

Dear entities, I offer you this consolation and direction. You have never truly left God nor left Home, except in your perception of such. All your seeking holds no meaning except in the belief systems relating to separation, which are all of them. You are God. God is with you. You never left Home. Love is Who You Are. Love is Life. You are Life expressed and reality awaits no more than your remembrance of this knowing.

To identify yourself functioning within a belief system is to initiate setting the intention for clarity, because once you recognize where you are, you have the clear knowing of where you are going, and there is nowhere to go but Home. That takes not one step, but rather the awakening of spirit to the Oneness that is Who You Are, simple remembrance, allowed and nurtured.

Love yourselves. Be yourselves. Be God and you will have full and complete knowledge of what Love is. Love is you.

With grateful appreciation that you hold the willingness to hear my words, designed to trigger your remembrance, I am Nademus. I bid you adieu. With God you are and I am. So be it. Indeed.
