Expectancy of creation Nademus

Good day entities! In your most recent of days since the Harmonic Concordance, you have been experiencing an array of change within yourselves and a major shift amongst yourselves. What is occurring is that you are beginning to experience yourselves as more whole, and through that experience you are making note of how other people seem to be engaging with you in a similar fashion. Indeed, the shift has occurred and with that shift into a more harmonic field of resonance, does each of you connect in a slightly and sometimes grossly different manner. Your awareness of the unification of male/female energies that pronounced itself during the Concordance and the elevation of matriarchal energies within old paradigm society are marking a reference point of high thought activating in creation. Your first question as Lightworkers, as always, is "What can I do now? And how is this changing sense of interaction of power moving our collective evolution?"

I would like to garner your enthusiasm into your next focus of creativity. As you are ever-evolving beings and participants of an ascending spiral of energies reaching into the ethers of thought for more and more appropriate creative fodder for the evolutionary phase of your beings, you are effectively changing the world. You are virtually in charge of setting the templates of creation to a new alignment of thought that will render new paradigm creation to take hold and anchor its energies within the Mother for the benefit of her ease of passage as well as for those who inhabit her body.

You are forming your world as a collective force of unified light, each contributing your energies and your focus to collectively enliven a reality. You have, in your perceived past, and will, in your perceived future, make grand and elaborate leaps of faith into a perceived future for which the shifting energies shall alter the landscape of your reality as the landscapes of desert sands shift and recreate themselves via the forces of the wind. The winds of change are upon you, and some of you say, but Nademus, the winds of change have been upon us for a very long time now. How is this different?

To that I say, indeed, the winds of change are effectually blowing with reverence at all times but they are sometimes blocked by the erection of thought structures designed to limit and deflect the flow. Your passage through the Concordance and your alignment to change is reaping benefit and structuring clarity within you individually and opening clarity of vision for the collective of humanity to see beyond these maligning structures of thought which have impeded your forward movement for eons. Now you say, "but wait, we as a society have moved and changed and are steadily improving our lot in life. With the Lightworkers help, humanity is seeing a vision of a future with peace and love that we are introducing now and which has also been introduced to the world via the recent grand alignment in the heavens by a benevolent Cosmos."

The crux of this conversation surrounds, literally, the stability of the change that is affecting itself through and upon you and your Gaia. Yes, change is taking place and with great fervor. Your choices are altering before your very eyes. You find that change has even modified its appearance. Certainly, contrast is present and functioning in your world of polar thought, but the vision of contrast in your "befores" held a much deeper and much more profound contrast to enliven the vision and assist you in developing and articulating clear choice. The choices are still there to make and the poles of contrast still hold the energy of that contrast to clarify your decision-making process, but what is happening is the polarity pole simply is not as long. In other words, the contrast is subsiding somewhat and allowing elements of breathing room because the contrast is not that sharp or delineating. That does not mean it is less clear, but simply that the pendulum does not have to swing with such force and vigor for such a distance and you as creators are much more close to center and balance.

You are finding your search for clarity easier to reach. You are finding your decisions are at once easier to make, but more distinct in the same moment. Your sense of equilibrium and balance and centeredness surpasses your memory of the same and the structures that were once blocking the flow of high thought do not hold the density of substance that once was their stronghold. So change is occurring and ease is increasing and your personal and collective renditions of light are becoming more and more balanced. So what does all this mean? What type of expectancy is cast upon the waters of creation?

For clarity, I wish to include here a brief discussion of expectation and expectancy. There are very clear differences that affect and direct thought. And remember that you as Creator are effectively garnering thought and projecting it into creation. So, using thought as your template of creation and your emotion as the driving force and passion of the template, you vibrate a command to the Universe, that part of yourself who recognizes you for who you are, Creative God. It aligns with you to do your bidding as the natural evolution of creation and through the Law of Attraction and the Law of Manifestation, a visual representation occurs for your lower senses to recognize and explore as your known reality. This occurs so seamlessly that your lower aspects and the physical density of self do not question reality. It sees the density of physical life as life itself. This aspect of interaction with reality from a dense standpoint has been the bane of the Lightworker as you have opened your vision to the awareness that there is much, much more than this physical gift of reality. Indeed, it is you, the Lightworker, the Creative God behind the Lightworker, whose very esoteric self is behind the creation itself. Even with your awakening awareness, forgetfulness continues to touch your creative gestures but in far less impactful fashion than it once did. That is the change and the force of the shifts that have occurred in consciousness and the aligning of thought with love source.

Now, in the process of using thought as a creative template, when you hold expectation of the creative results, that template you are using is no longer pure with the flexible movement of ease, but becomes rigid and brittle in requirement, the expectation of a certain pre-envisioned result and predetermined effect. Expectation holds the template of creation captive to the way it ought to or should be, based on your memories of the way it was or your dreams of the way it ought to be. These ideas are all envisioned outside of the Power Moment, the Now Moment. As they are envisioned outside of the Now moment, they hold fear and fear is but an outcome of thought and, in this case, also a precursor of thought. Expectation imprisons thought.

Expectancy, on the other hand, emits a glorious energetic pulse of freedom and clarity as it is born in the Now Moment, the moment where God lives. Where God lives, love lives and love is flexible, free, fresh, flowing, joyful and aligned to clarity. So expectancy allows. This does not mean that expectancy is not purely directed, for it is. When you, as God the creator of your reality, hold expectancy toward a thought template, you offer the awareness and knowing of yourself as Creator and in doing so, render clarity of the outcome with an outcome that is love-based and honoring of truth, not requirement.

So, to return to what type of expectancy is cast upon the waters, what you are viewing is expectancy of pure thought, unadulterated by rigid thinking, tradition and conditioned thinking guided by an agenda that is not in your best interest. With the shifts that have occurred and the influx of Christ Consciousness awakening within you, your expectancy of creation is one of collective joy and reunification in your awareness of the already whole essence of spirit that you are. Remember, to reunify something, it must be perceived at some point as separate. Note that I say, perceived. That is exactly what has occurred.

You, who are God, and cannot be separated from Self, have through the auspices of fear, believed yourself to be separate and lived that separate reality until once again the notion of wholeness took hold in your dream. You are literally reunifying your sense of self, not your already whole being. You are illuminating for you that which has been forgotten for so long. That you are Whole. That you are God. That you are Creator. That you are Love. You are remembering, re-remembering, bringing back together in thought that which is already together in essence. And as you draw your thoughts into alignment with the Christ Consciousness of your true identity, you shatter the misconception that there is anything else. You are One Being, individuated to explore Self from many vantage points. But you are nevertheless One. Remembering that is your expectancy.

You are profoundly loved. I bid you adieu. With God you are and I am. So be it.
Indeed.
