Good Day Entities! It is indeed my pleasure to communicate with you this day about a concept shaping your world, not at its basis, but through its expression. This concept forms your reality through expression and through articulation. This concept is communication. Now communication comes in many forms and mannerisms. Most certainly, its verbal form is your most recognized mannerism. You verbally communicate your desires, needs, ideas, positions, beliefs and numerous other things by “voicing” your opinion. You also communicate by the written word through books, articles, the internet and your personal letters. You use your body for communication by translating emotion into beautiful paintings, an exquisite dance form, poetry in motion, paintings, sculpture and all manner of beauty exemplified in physical terms. Communication paves the way for expression and literally provides the pathway of expressing life.

But is this all that communication is? How else can communication be accomplished? Are words an effective means of communication? What about interpretation? There are many questions lingering in regard to your means of connection in third dimension. Let us explore this concept from another angle.

Entities, it is important to recognize that communication is more than a means to express a thought or emotion. It is literally the connecting unit of action that enables mankind to explore its connection to self. Let us use your own body as an example. Each and every cell of your body holds all the information and knowledge and light existing in the whole of your physical being. Each cell is part and parcel for the whole expression of one particular unique unit of All That Is exploring life in an individualized fashion. Each cell then communicates or connects with all other cells of your body to share, intercept and collect information pertinent to the purposeful functioning of the whole body.

Communication is essential and is accomplished in spectacular fashion without one solitary word, written or verbal, being used. Your body uses chemical interactions, and vibratory resonance to share information with itself. It offers light, or knowledge, to itself in continuous flow and creative repetition to progress the body into expanded states of being and you often don't have a clue that it is occurring. That is how spectacular and magnificent you are. You are so good at what you do, the body runs with such efficiency and focus that it is unrecognized and literally taken for granted. But know communication is key to this propulsion through creative flow. Without communication, life as you know it would not--could not--exist.

When you are interacting with others from an awakened state of being, your ability to understand others is unlimited in scope. Subtle vibrational undertones can alert your intuitional radar to understandings outside of the normal communication modes. Intuition is your form of the resonant tone of deep connection to life. What is important here is to completely understand that life and love are outgrowths of All That Is, Source, Mother/Father God's inquisitive nature. For Source is so enamored of itself and so curious to explore regions of itself heretofore undefined and uncharted, that it extends its scope to include the individual as primary seeker in a concert of exploration.

So communicative exploration occurs on a moment-to-moment basis as a means to connect facets of life in an expanding illustration of itself from the microcosm to the macrocosm. And where do you fit into this picture? Entities, you are the question mark for Source. You offer Source the means to answer the question it asks about itself and about its relationship to itself in third dimension. You are the question mark that supports the search. The search defines the exploration and the exploration brings the concept of expanded beingness to Source that expands reality to greater and greater proportions.

You, as what I call the Fingertips of God, are the functioning aspects of divine Source, seeking answers about itself in relationship to a dimensional space of solid form, demonstrating itself in a world of polarity that mirrors to itself via the visual representation of thought. In other words, you are the exquisite form of communication that Source offers itself. You are the very love and light of life. You are Source communicating with itself.

Now remember, you have an unlimited number of ways in which communication supports and enables your expansion from a personal perspective. Each of you together in a collective community forms an expanded whole. You are literally an individually expressed form of communication. You speak volumes about your ideas of the world, your world. You live ideas and belief systems; you form relationships with all aspects of reality; you enliven concepts of reality by your participation with those concepts. Your very presence provides the glue which bonds through love.

Do you understand how important you are yet? Do you get the impact your being offers to the whole of the world? Do you recognize the divinity of your presence? Remember that communication is that which joins aspects of life into a unified whole and allows that whole to process itself incrementally and maintain cohesion. Communication is light and life. Without it, you would not be. So, as you explore your reality day-to-day, moment-by-moment and create for yourself the varied experiences of life, know that life is available to you because you are the glue that holds life together.

My goodness, you may say. That sounds a bit much! How could I possibly be that important? People come and go in this world, being born and dying and the world goes on in superb fashion either way. No one person seems so important that the world stops for them.

How astute of you to recognize! How profound your awareness to be so able to conceive of the Oneness that is the premise for your existence! It is through that Oneness that you even have the opportunity to express and communicate in your individuated way. Without Oneness, which is wholeness in foundational form, the opportunity to individually explore would be impossible. Communication would not function.

Entities, I often inform you of your valued importance in the scope of reality and of your divinity in its recognized form. Your acceptance of that assessment is, of course, your choice. It is your option to include this communication in your assessment of yourself and your potential in the creation of your reality.

You can choose to deny your magnificence and live as though you are faulty in some fashion, but why? You can choose to observe other's exploration because fear denies you your own communication with self, which is life. You can choose to forget your divine origins and slow your spiritual evolution. But I ask you how it would serve you to limit yourself in any fashion? How does defining yourself as less support life? How could limiting your scope of creation, denying your potential and gliding through life without self-communication provide for you a sense of wholeness? Yet many of you assume that to come forward with a self-assured concept of self is egotistical and not suited to doing the correct thing. Many of you purposely step into the background to allow others to "shine". Why? Do you believe that they could not shine if you were also shining?

I offer these questions to challenge your limited ideas and to assist self-communication through the process of reminding you of your light and reminding you that your light is life and all life is communication of the whole. You cannot deny portions of truth and still see truth. You cannot deny portions of your connection to Source and still know yourself as Source. You cannot deny your light without assuming darkness and limitation to be your lot.

Entities, please, allow yourselves the opportunity to see clearly. See that love and life and communication are aspects of what you know as God. Being the articulation of God in a world of form requires communication. I invite you to remember and in your remembering, you are innately communicating the love in all things. I am Nademus. I bid you adieu. With God you are and I AM. So be it. Indeed.
