Indeed Entities! I am Nademus come forth to connect and nurture upon what may be termed an anniversary of fear gone mad. As is well known to you all, one of your years ago a most compelling opportunity arose for humanity to awaken to its divinity. And I am not speaking of the World Trade Centers' collapse. I am speaking most directly to the tongue of mankind, to the words and ideas and judgments that have spilled forth from the mouths of mankind in reaction to this well orchestrated event. In the moments of the experience and those moments and days and months following, your internet and your media and your notifiers were hard at work relaying the drama that had occurred and relaying the ideas and suppositions, predictions and prognostications. There was anger and the seeking of revenge, blame and accusation. War on terrorism unfolded as a handy answer to what literally was and still is an event orchestrated for and by the world at large and more significantly, individuals very much known as the puppeteers.

What compelling opportunity, you ask, arose from this misery and destruction? What reason for the loss of life and the complete devastation of trust in a way of life once taken for granted by a country known for its excesses and its freedoms.

The opportunity of which I speak is the opportunity to recognize how forgetfulness of your divine origin spurs the mass belief in victimization. In every publication, in every facet of media, those directly involved in this drama were referred to as the victims of 911, the victims of terrorism, the victims of a world in disbelief as they watched over and over the drama before them. Visions of the collapse were shown over and over, indelibly imprinted upon the fabric of your minds, retching empathy and collusion with the families and friends of those so intimately experiencing this drama. It was so purposefully laid out to reflect victimization that to think or feel otherwise literally put a person on the outskirts of reasonable behavior or worse, on a list of subversives who just might be involved in the creation of this incident.

And so, the public took for granted the conditions as laid out so superbly for them and began to reinforce and repeat the belief through the repetitions of ceremony and pictures and talk shows and news conferences. But how and why could such a thing happen? And again, I am not referring to the World Trade Centers' collapse. I am referring to the establishment, deeply imbedded in your psyche, of the potential for victimization and fear. You thought, if this happened to these innocents, then it could happen to me and my loved ones. Fear began to lead your thinking to even greater degrees than it previously had and fear directed your actions and your behaviors. I submit to you that these behaviors were programmed in order that you, as a collective whole, became more malleable and controllable and easily influenced. You literally were so frightened that you began to turn over your freedoms without a thought. You handed your empowerment to anyone who put forth the opportunity for you to do so, especially if they also offered a promise of safety and certainty that this would never happen again. And so you have lived this year, some of you ever so gradually relaxing into your new world and forgetting how you got there and some of you still in the grip of terror, because you are still reminded and alerted to how you, too, could be victimized.

Entities, take succor from the knowledge that such allegiance to fear is not natural. It is not real but as orchestrated as the event itself. You are deeply powerful beings, individually and collectively. You are so powerful that your power signals threat to those run by ego and through that ego, are intent upon control.

You have the opportunity to remember yourself. You have the opportunity to realign to the powerful now moment in which God lives, the powerful now moment from which all things are created. When you are in the deliberate act of creation from the God moment of now, love is the only outcome. But if you are involved in default creativity using the memories of the past or the hopes for the future, then you are engaged with ego and subject to the fear that lives in ego.

In this time when every source shouts to you, "Remember 911", assert your divinity, your personal power and your divine spark and love your way through life. Take the opportunity before you to remember yourself and to shine light on confusion. 911 was not an act of victimization. It was a created reality, spurred to manifestation by the collective thoughts and visions prevalent in a forgetful society. It is a created reality that speaks to the concept of contrast, tremendous contrast, for the purpose of creating your reality from a purposeful place and one filled with the spectrum of love and light.

Use your innate understanding of who you are to dispel the concept that you or your family or those intimately involved with 911 are, or could be, weak. There is no such potential with God. The greatest potential with God and God sparks such as yourselves, is to wholly understand the act of creation and to do so deliberately and with intention and purpose. This is the time of opportunity to enfold your world in the light of God, remembering truth, remembering God, remembering your personal power. Let the opportunity exist for you by remembering there are no victims, but rather choosers who may do so from a state of awareness or choosers who do so from a state of forgetfulness. Take the opportunity to remember 911 from the powerful place within you that nurtures love and light. Be peaceful reminders to the world of what true power is. Indeed Entities. Adieu. With God you are and I am. So be it.
