

Brenda Hill

Prism Path
E 12318 Lowery rd
La Farge, WI 54639
prism-path.com
(866) 374-0243

Uncertainty and the Field of All Possibility Nademus

Good day entities. I am Nademus, come to remind you of the incredible force of light that shines within each and every one of you. This force of light holds spontaneous fields of power and through this power do you bring forth your energy unto, and upon, this field of possibility that is your earth plane. Another way to say this is that you are God, born of love and fullness in the rich theater of creation and acting out your knowledge in your particular creative arena. In the enactment of this rendering of thought, you, as the individuated spark of light, enliven a specific aspect of thought, giving life to an idea, building and participating with that idea moment-to-moment.

Life then, is a rendition, a version, self-created and self-propelled. It is fueled by desire, directed by intention, experienced by involvement and known to you through the multi-dimensional quality of being. Life speaks to your knowledge and expression. It calls forth your willingness to step out of the known and experience the unknown fields of uncertainty. Life is the force of an idea filled out to its fullest proportions by interaction with uncertainty.

But then, if life is the force of an idea filled out to its fullest proportions by interaction with uncertainty, is certainty a contradiction to life?

First, we must examine what uncertainty is. As you know uncertainty, it is that element of experience that is outside of the known, the tried-and-true, the comfortable old shoe, or the way it is. In other words, uncertainty is that element of creation that provides no prior knowledge or assumption of basis. When you approach an uncertain future or enter into an uncertain situation, there is no sense of underlying stability as you contemplate the action you are taking. Uncertainty, as you know it, is an "anything goes" type of scenario where ego can grasp hold of, and thrive with, the fear that is generated by uncertain conditions.

Underlying stability is a factor that you have grown to expect when the contemplation of a successful venture is desired. You think in terms of stability when you contemplate your and your family's life. Stability holds for you the sense of peace that ego thrives upon. This kind of peace is what tells you that you can be sure, or relatively sure, of a venture before you step in, not too many surprises and a level playing ground.

Now this would translate to the following kind of thinking. Let us hypothesize that you were planning your future career while you were a high school student. Think back to your state of dreaming hopefulness when you were in the position to outline your life. Each of you had your own special idea of what you wanted your life to be, to look like. You had dreams. Those dreams were colored by your excitement and your imaginings and the sweetness of creativity. You had dreams, and dreams inherently hold no certainty.

But, did you seek to live your dreams? Did you take the leap of faith from the precipice of opportunity? Did you find the joy that every cell in your body was charged with the life of? Or, did you stop and listen to the call of reason? Did you listen to the advice of those in your life who had had some experience and had stories to tell that would discount your dreams? Did the practical application of stability assume the greater stature in your thinking when you were told by those well-intentioned individuals that dreams are great but you must get practical and you must be sure and you must enter into a career that has a stable record of success in a world where diversity is not king? Were you lulled by the drone of advice from others, complete with a full accounting of why this or that worked for them and why it is the best, or only, way. Go to college, or trade school and learn something that the world finds useful and that there is a call for in the marketplace. Dream of being an artist? Certainly not! Who could make a living being an artist?! You must do something more viable and practical and what history has proven to be supportive and abundant.

You listened to your parents and you listened to your counselors (who remember, are very well intentioned). So, you began to seek out curriculum and degree status of an abundant career. Let's see now, lawyers are quite successful. There is a huge need for them with litigation abounding due to constant disputes. Let the certainty of the law lead you to success. Doctors are totally necessary because illness is on the rise. No greater success and status than being a doctor! But you always dreamed of being an artist. Oh, well. You will paint later when you have succeeded and have established yourself and your life. Your life will have that certainty to it and you will then know what to expect. Then you can allow yourself the luxury of exemplifying your greatest desires.

Let me ask you, and you can fill in this idea with your own personalized version, but are you living your dream or are you living the certainty of assumption? And if you are living the certainty of assumption, then does your life version reek with joy or boredom?

Entities, what I am offering you this day is that the concept of certainty/uncertainty is like all other areas of contrast in your lives. There are polarity poles and degrees of experience. This kind of experience lives in ego's realm. In this realm, acquiescing to ego's hold, you venture from one side of the polarity pole to the other, dreaming your dream, being talked out of your dream into practicality and logic, living this practicality and logic in the certainty of day-to-day unchanging stature, and finally, reaching the point that everyone comes to at some point in their version of their particular life experience. They come to the point of questioning certainty.

Questioning certainty is your gift to yourself. It is, in its own way, a certainty to occur. Please forgive the play on words here. I could not resist. However, to question certainty is to question assumption and to question ego. And when you question ego, you are literally coming into full awareness that there is more. With the awareness that there is more, you expand your version of yourself in this life, in this version of being, and you push the envelope. You begin to awaken into the spirit within you that knows it is through uncertainty that you literally ply your creative abilities and nurture your truth.

When you enter into experience via uncertainty, you open yourself and your creative flow to the field of possibility that holds all opportunity and potential. Uncertainty is fresh, open, alive, and pliable. Conversely, certainty has parameters, boundaries and limitations. Certainty is old, known, compacted potential, closed and tight.

Now, certainty/uncertainty are most certainly on the polarity pole with which you engage during your sojourn within these experiential dimensions. These polarities give rise to contrast, which supports and delineates choice, your means of expression in this free will universe. So the contrast is a third-dimensional exploration. But this, and all other dimensions in which you are participating, represents only aspects of this life you are, this idea you are promulgating about reality. They reflect a framework, a reference point.

Understanding the conditions under which you participate allows for your spirit to explore and play. What I wish for, and invite, is for your ability to dream to enliven your understanding of self. I invite you to see beyond the polarity and into the full and whole concept of All That Is, living and breathing through you, an aspect that is part and parcel of God. I invite your dreaming nature to glorify your spiritual truth so that the knowingness of yourself as God holds no familiarity with the known aspects of certainty but rather that you touch into the glory of light, love, life and creation and know yourself as whole.

But while you are an individuated expression of God, living in and on this demonstrable plane, it is my invitation to you to seek forth freedom and choose uncertainty to unleash potential. Choose uncertainty to express your experience of power; choose uncertainty to realize life.

When you, from the standpoint of soul extension, live your life in uncertainty, you open to the field of all possibility. As spirit, you are that possibility. Remember to live in this world, but be not of this world. That distinction and understanding opens your quest to creative potentialization formulated by love and freedom with no consequence of fear. Know that opportunity thrives on, and is potentialized by, uncertainty.

I offer this in profound love. Indeed. Adieu. With God you are and I am. So be it.

©2003 by Brenda Hill